Overview & Current Events

Garmin is a technology company based in Switzerland. It manufactures navigation, communication, and information devices and applications that are enabled by GPS. Its business segments are as follows: Auto, Aviation, Marine, Outdoor, and Fitness. The Auto segment offers auto navigation products for vehicles. The Aviation segment includes navigation, communications transmitters and receivers, multi-function displays, electronic flight instrumentation systems, automatic flight control systems, and traffic advisory systems. The Marine segment includes products for recreational boats. The Outdoor segment makes products for outdoor activities, while the Fitness segment makes products designed for activity tracking. Garmin produces about $8 billion in annual revenue and has a $60 billion market capitalization.

Garmin posted second quarter earnings on July 29th, 2026, and results were much better than expected on both the top and bottom lines. Adjusted earnings-per-share came to $2.81, which was a staggering 52 cents ahead of estimates. Revenue grew 11.6% year-over-year to $2.02 billion, beating estimates by $80 million.

Gross margin was 62.4% of revenue on favorable product mix and tariff refunds, the latter of which amounted to about $21 million for the quarter.

Fitness revenue was $757 million, Outdoor was $483 million, Aviation was $269 million, Marine was $341 million, and Auto OEM was $172 million.

The company ended the quarter with cash and equivalents of $4.4 billion, and free cash flow for the year is expected to be $1.4 billion with capex of $550 million.

Adjusted earnings-per-share is now expected to be $10.10 after another outstanding quarter.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

Garmin has engineered a major turnaround due to structural changes in the technology industry. Garmin rose to prominence due in large part to its automotive GPS devices. However, GPS devices for the automotive industry were rendered virtually obsolete with the widespread adoption of the smartphone.

As a result, Garmin has restructured itself around the aviation, marine, outdoor, and fitness markets, and has had major success in those categories. We expect 9% annual earnings growth through 2031. We see higher margins as helping boost earnings, and as Garmin's top line strength has been quite sustainable. Rising gross margins and lower operating costs as a percentage of revenue bode well for future earnings. Dividends are expected to grow at a strong rate, and we see the payout rising to $6.46 per share by 2031. Garmin is paying $4.20 in dividends per share annually at the present payout, good for a market-beating yield.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	Now	2031
Avg. P/E	15.7	18.0	17.2	18.6	18.9	24.6	18.0	23.0	27.9	23.7	31.0	25.0
Avg. Yld.	4.6%	3.9%	3.4%	2.7%	2.5%	1.9%	3.2%	2.3%	1.5%	2.0%	1.3%	1.7%

In the past 10 years, Garmin stock traded with an average price-to-earnings ratio of ~20; on this basis, the stock looks overvalued today. More recently, shares have been valued at higher multiples due to rapid earnings expansion. Shares trade at 31 times earnings estimates for 2026, well above our fair value of 25 times earnings, which rose based upon outstanding recent results. The yield is now at 1.3%, and we expect it will remain in about that same spot. We note the yield is back towards its historical lows as the share price has performed nicely.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2026	2031
Payout	72%	69%	58%	50%	47%	46%	56%	52%	41%	47%	42%	42%

The dividend appears secure, with a payout ratio of 42% of earnings. During the Great Recession in 2008-2009, the company saw earnings drop, but managed to continue to pay out its dividend. We do not believe Garmin would be resistant to a prolonged recession when consumers reduce spending on discretionary technology products.

Garmin does not possess many notable competitive advantages, which are hard to come by in the technology sector. Technology is a highly competitive and rapidly changing industry. Garmin lost its advantage in automotive GPS devices when trends changed related to widespread smartphone adoption. However, the company has been investing heavily in non-automotive markets to fuel future growth, and we note its leadership in Aviation and Marine products.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Garmin is a financially healthy company with a very strong balance sheet, and strong rates of growth. Garmin continues to produce strong revenue growth, and even better margin expansion. Following Q2 results, total annual returns are estimated at 5.8%. We see a -4.2% impact from the valuation, while our growth estimate of 9%, and yield of 1.3% are good enough for a reiteration of a hold rating.
