Overview & Current Events

Sempra (SRE) was founded in 1996 and has grown into a $56 billion market cap company. It serves one of the largest utility customer bases in the U.S., as it distributes natural gas and electricity in Southern California (over 20 million customers) and owns a majority stake in Texas-based Oncor, a transmission and distribution business (over 10 million customers). The company also owns and operates other utilities and merchant renewable energy projects, liquefied natural gas facilities, and gas pipes and storage in the U.S. and Latin America. On August 22nd, 2023, the stock performed a two-for-one stock split. All figures in this report have been adjusted for this split.

Sempra benefits from two key trends, namely the transition towards cleaner energy resources and the advance of the U.S. as a global energy leader. In 2018, the company sold most of its non-core assets in order to better focus on its large core North American regulated utility, LNG export, and Mexican infrastructure (IEnova) assets as well as deleverage the balance sheet. Given the strong competitive advantages enjoyed by these core assets, we believe that these moves have made Sempra more attractive.

In early August, Sempra reported (8/6/26) results for the second quarter of 2026. Earnings-per-share grew 30% thanks to rate hikes, from $0.89 to $1.16, beating the analysts' estimates by $0.10. Sempra has beaten the analysts' estimates in 18 of the last 23 quarters. It confirmed its positive guidance thanks to a promising 5-year capital plan of $65 billion. It expects earnings-per-share of $4.80-$5.30 in 2026 and $5.10-$5.70 in 2027. At the mid-point, the guidance for this year implies 8% growth of earnings-per-share. We still expect earnings-per-share of approximately $5.10 this year.

Sempra's enormous economies of scale and regulated monopolies in California and Texas should enable it to capitalize on any economic growth in those regions to drive long term growth. Sempra has a record 5-year capital plan of $65 billion, which will be a major growth driver in the upcoming years. Additionally, Sempra's assets in Mexico enjoy a first mover advantage, which should enable them to grow rapidly as Mexico begins to invest more seriously in its massively underdeveloped infrastructure. The LNG export portfolio should also see strong demand in the long run, as the U.S. continues its transition into a global energy exporting giant. The U.S. is expected to more than double its LNG export capacity in 2025-2030. As a result, management has several expansion projects, which should contribute significantly to the company's cash flows. Overall, Sempra has provided guidance for 7%-9% annual growth of earnings-per-share over the long run. In order to be on the safe side, we have assumed 7% average annual growth until 2031. This is slightly higher than the 6.2% average growth rate over the last decade but it is reasonable given the guidance of management.

Moreover, the ability of management to issue such long-term guidance is a testament to the reliability of the business model of the company.

Valuation Analysis

| Year      | 2016 | 2017 | 2018 | 2019 | 2020 | 2021 | 2022 | 2023 | 2024 | 2025 | Now  | 2031 |
|-----------|------|------|------|------|------|------|------|------|------|------|------|------|
| Avg. P/E  | 18.5 | 19.8 | 19.4 | 19.8 | 16.1 | 15.4 | 16.9 | 16.0 | 16.8 | 17.3 | 17.1 | 18.3 |

Sempra is currently trading at a price-to-earnings ratio of 17.1, which is lower than its 10-year average of 18.3. We expect the stock to trade close to its average valuation level in five years. If this occurs, the stock will enjoy a 1.4% annualized expansion of its price-to-earnings ratio.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

| Payout | 55.3% | 60.7% | 64.3% | 57.1% | 52.1% | 52.2% | 49.7% | 51.6% | 53.3% | 55.0% | 51.6% | 49.2% |

As a regulated utility in possession of dominant businesses in their respective regions, Sempra possesses a clear moat around a significant portion of its earnings. At the same time, however, the regulated nature of its pricing prevents it from earning surplus profits. These businesses, as well as the stable, mission-critical nature of its infrastructure business in Mexico make it quite recession resistant. As proof of this, Sempra's earnings-per-share increased during the Great Recession (2008 and 2009) and throughout the coronavirus crisis as well. However, its LNG export business and international exposure make it somewhat susceptible to commodity price, geopolitical, and currency exchange risks. Nevertheless, its high-quality assets, low payout ratio, stable cash flows and strong growth prospects make it a fairly low-risk investment. Moreover, while the company has a somewhat weak balance sheet, it has improved its interest coverage ratio to 2.5 thanks to the sale of non-core assets.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Sempra owns quality assets, many of which are in recession-resistant businesses. Its utility businesses are dominant players in their fields and its LNG export and infrastructure businesses have strong growth potential. Combined, they create a business that has both stable and defensive characteristics. Sempra has a highly promising 5-year growth plan. The stock can offer an 11.0% average annual return over the next five years thanks to 7.0% growth, its 3.0% dividend and a 1.4% valuation tailwind. It receives a hold rating.
