Overview & Current Events

STAG Industrial is an owner and operator of industrial real estate. It is focused on single-tenant industrial properties and has 606 buildings across 41 states in the United States. STAG Industrial went public in 2011 and has a market capitalization of $7.1 billion.

The focus of this REIT on single-tenant properties might create higher risk compared to multi-tenant properties, as the former are either fully occupied or completely vacant. However, STAG Industrial executes a deep quantitative and qualitative analysis on its tenants. As a result, it has incurred credit losses that have been less than 0.1% of its revenues since its IPO. As per the latest data, 53% of the tenants are publicly rated and 31% of the tenants are rated “investment grade.” The company typically does business with established tenants to reduce risk.

In late July, STAG Industrial reported (7/28/26) results for the second quarter of 2026. Thanks to rent hikes and the acquisition of properties, core FFO per share grew 3% over the prior year’s quarter, from $0.63 to $0.65, in line with the analysts’ consensus. Net operating income grew 3% over the prior year’s quarter even though the occupancy rate decreased sequentially from 95.1% to 94.5%. Interest expense increased 12% year-on-year due to a higher debt load. Management provided guidance for FFO per share of $2.61-$2.65 in 2026. Accordingly, we have raised our forecast for FFO per share this year from $2.60 to $2.63. STAG Industrial has proved fairly resilient to the environment of elevated interest rates in recent years thanks to its decent balance sheet. We also note that the REIT has not missed the analysts’ estimates for 34 quarters in a row.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

Year	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2026	2031

STAG Industrial has grown its FFO per share at a 6.6% average annual rate over the last decade and at a 6.2% average annual rate over the last five years. The U.S. industrial market is more than $1 trillion in size and STAG Industrial still has a market share that is less than 1% of its target market, which includes the top 60 markets of the country. Therefore, the REIT has ample room to continue to grow for years. As STAG Industrial has proved fairly resilient to the downturn caused by high interest rates, we expect it to grow its FFO per share close to its historical pace in the upcoming years. If the REIT grows its FFO per share at a 5.0% annual rate, its FFO per share will grow from $2.63 this year to $3.36 in 2031.

Updated August 17th, 2026 by Aristofanis Papadatos

STAG Industrial is currently trading at a P/FFO ratio of 14.1, which is lower than its historical average of 15.9. If the stock trades at its average valuation level in five years, it will enjoy a 2.5% annualized gain in its returns.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2026	2031
Payout	97.2%	84.4%	78.9%	77.7%	76.2%	70.4%	66.1%	64.2%	61.7%	58.4%	58.9%	47.8%

STAG Industrial has a well-laddered lease maturity schedule, with a weighted average lease term of 5 years. Thus, the cash flows of the REIT can be considered fairly reliable under normal business conditions. STAG Industrial was one of the few REITs that were paying dividends on a monthly basis but it has switched to quarterly dividend payments this year. Investors should also note that STAG Industrial currently offers a 4.2% yield and has never cut its dividend throughout its short history. Moreover, while its payout ratio rose to high levels during 2014-2016, it has fallen to healthy levels in the last three years. Nevertheless, the REIT has raised its annual dividend by less than 1% in 8 of the last 9 years. Therefore, investors should expect modest dividend growth going forward. Moreover, the REIT heavily dilutes its unitholders on a regular basis. Its unit count has more than quadrupled, from 42 million in 2013 to 191 million now.

Due to its focus on industrial properties, the REIT is highly vulnerable to recessions. On the bright side, the pandemic hardly affected the performance of STAG Industrial, mostly thanks to the swift recovery of the economy amid huge fiscal stimulus packages.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

STAG Industrial has proved markedly resilient to the pandemic and the subsequent downturn from high interest rates, partly thanks to the strong profile of most of its tenants. We expect the stock to offer a 10.6% average annual return over the next five years thanks to 5.0% growth, its 4.2% dividend and a 2.5% valuation tailwind. The stock maintains its hold rating.
