Overview & Current Events

Stanley Black & Decker is a world leader in power tools, hand tools, and related items. The company holds the top global position in tools and storage sales. Stanley Black & Decker is second in the world in the areas of commercial electronic security and engineered fastening. Stanley Works and Black & Decker merged in 2010 to form the current company, though the company can trace its history back to 1843. Black & Decker was founded in Baltimore, MD in 1910 and manufactured the world's first portable power tool. The company is one of just 58 Dividend Kings.

On July 23rd, 2026, Stanley Black & Decker announced that it was raising its quarterly dividend 1.2% to $0.84 per share, extending the company's dividend growth streak to 59 consecutive years.

On July 29th, 2026, Stanley Black & Decker released second quarter results for the period ending June 30th, 2026. For the quarter, revenue increased 1.3% to $4.0 billion, which beat estimates by $40 million. Adjusted earnings-per-share of $1.57 compared favorably to $1.08 in the prior year and was $0.36 above expectations.

Companywide organic revenue grew 3.0% for the period as volume was higher. Organic sales for Tools & Outdoor, the largest segment within the company, were up 3% as volume growth of 3% and a 1% currency exchange tailwind were offset by a 1% decline related to the transition to a licensing model for gas walk-behind outdoor products. North America was up 4%, Europe declined 2%, and the rest of the world was higher by 3%. Retail in North America was stronger than it had been in some time thanks to power tools in the retail and commercial and industrial channels. The Engineered Fastening segment grew 3% as volume was up 2% and pricing added 1%. Automotive was higher by 2% and outpaced the market. The adjusted gross margin expanded 620 basis points to 33.7% for the period. Stanley Black & Decker has achieved more than $2.0 billion of cost savings since it began restructuring the company. Following the closed divestiture of its Consolidated Aerospace Manufacturing business to Howmet Aerospace (HWM) last quarter, Stanley Black & Decker reduced debt by $1.7 billion and repurchased $250 million worth of stock during Q2.

Stanley Black & Decker provided updated guidance for 2026 as well. The company now expects adjusted earnings-per-share to be in a range of $5.20 to $5.80 for the year, up from $4.90 to $5.70 previously. At the midpoint, this would be an 18% increase from 2025.

Growth on a Per-Share Basis

Stanley Black & Decker's earnings-per-share have declined 3.6% annually over the last decade and 13.3% over the last five years. The company remained profitable over the Great Recession, but saw earnings decline 15% in 2008 and 20% in 2009. In the years since, Stanley Black & Decker had generally seen its earnings-per-share rise consistently before 2022. The company did return to year-over-year growth in 2024 and 2025 and has guided towards a meaningful gain this year.

Updated July 31st, 2026, by Nathan Parsh

We reaffirm our expectation that the company to grow earnings-per-share at a rate of 8% annually going forward as Stanley Black & Decker's results are starting from a low base. Combined with the leading brands that the company offers, this should help propel growth once supply chain constraints and higher inflationary pressures ease. We reaffirm our dividend growth forecast of 2% annually as this is close to the five-year growth rate.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	Now	2031
Avg. P/E	17.2	19.1	17.5	16.9	17.6	16.8	16.3	67.7	18.4	15.9	17.5	15.0
Avg. Yld.	2.0%	1.7%	1.8%	1.9%	1.9%	1.6%	4.2%	3.3%	4.1%	4.4%	3.5%	3.1%

Shares of Stanley Black & Decker have gained $19, or 24.7%, since our May 5th, 2026 update. Based on our earnings estimate for 2026, the stock now trades with a price-to-earnings ratio, or P/E, of 17.5. The average multiple over the last decade is more than 22 times earnings, but we believe the P/E ratio for 2023 to be an outlier. Excluding that year, the average P/E was 15.6 over this period. We reaffirm our target P/E of 15. If shares were to revert to our target P/E by 2031, then multiple contraction would reduce annual returns by 3.0% over this period. We again note that Stanley Black & Decker's yield remains near the high end of its range over the past decade even after the recent rally.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2026	2031
Payout	35%	33%	32%	33%	31%	27%	69%	222%	75%	71%	61%	46%

As seen during the 2008/2009-time period, Stanley Black & Decker is not recession-proof, but investors who were willing to hold shares of the company from the 2008 lows have seen their shares grow enormously. The company's typically low payout ratio does make it likely that dividends will continue rising even through a serious economic downturn. Stanley Black & Decker's key competitive advantage is that its products are well-known and respected by customers. This was why the company has been able to increase prices in certain product categories over the years and not see a decline in sales. Stanley Black & Decker has also been very active in making strategic acquisitions to help grow the company. For example, adding the Craftsman Brand has been a meaningful contributor to results since the 2017 acquisition.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Stanley Black & Decker is now expected to produce an annual return of 7.7% through 2031, down from our prior estimate of 11.8%. This projection stems from 8% earnings growth and a starting yield of 3.5% that are offset by a low single-digit headwind from multiple contraction. Stanley Black & Decker continues to work through the challenges in its business, including tariffs, but cost reductions have been beneficial to the company. EPS guidance for the year was also raised. That said, we rate shares of Stanley Black & Decker as a hold, but note the impressive growth streak for what is a cyclical company.
