Overview & Current Events

Hormel Foods was founded in 1891 in Minnesota. Since that time, the company has grown into an $11.3 billion market capitalization juggernaut in the food products industry with about $12.4 billion in annual revenue. Hormel has kept its core competency as a processor of meat products for well over a hundred years but has also grown into other business lines through acquisitions. The company sells its products in 80 countries worldwide, and its brands include Skippy, SPAM, Applegate, Justin's, and more than 30 others. In addition, Hormel is a member of the Dividend Kings, having increased its dividend for 60 consecutive years.

Hormel posted third quarter earnings on August 27th, 2026, and results were mixed once again as the company continues to struggle to reignite growth. Adjusted earnings-per-share came to 37 cents, which was two cents ahead of estimates. Revenue was off 2.3% year-on-year, however, to $2.96 billion. That missed estimates by $80 million. Despite the weakness, the management team boosted guidance for the rest of the year very slightly, noting portfolio-shaping actions, lower commodity pricing, and a consumer environment that's under pressure. Organic net sales were off 2% year-over-year.

Adjusted operating margin was up 60 basis points year-over-year to 9% of revenue, a bright spot in the otherwise average quarter. Operating cash flow was $241 million, up 54% year-over-year. Capex was $68 million and the company returned $161 million to shareholders through dividends during the quarter. Cash ended the quarter at $840 million, up $169 million since the beginning of the year.

Hormel's growth was once better than it is now, as we've seen a handful of years in the recent past where earnings were lower year-over-year. Relatively consistent results have come from a steady stream of acquisitions and a bit of organic growth. This has afforded Hormel the ability to consistently raise its dividend as well.

We are forecasting forward earnings growth of 5% annually as Hormel has been building its margin profile recently, but earnings are also at what should be a trough level to start from after years of weakness. We see sales growth as the primary driver of earnings-per-share expansion moving forward as recent results continue to show that margins and volumes can be unpredictable for this business. Hormel will likely continue to buy growth because its legacy businesses are not currently producing it outside of an extraordinary circumstance early in 2020. Margins remain in focus, particularly after a rough 2025. With top line growth modest and margins still improving, we are cautious on Hormel's future. Management seems more bullish for 2026, and we note sales were very weak in Q2 but stronger margins covered that weakness for now.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	Now	2031
Avg. P/E	23.4	21.8	19.3	24.2	28.4	26.9	25.0	20.2	19.0	15.8	14.0	18.0
Avg. Yld.	1.5%	2.0%	2.1%	2.0%	2.0%	2.1%	2.3%	3.4%	3.6%	5.4%	5.6%	3.9%

Hormel's price-to-earnings ratio has been volatile in the last decade, sinking as low as 13 in 2009 before rebounding to 23.4 in 2016. It sits at 14 now and we believe it could move higher over time towards our fair value estimate of 18 times earnings. That works out to a meaningful tailwind to total returns over the next five years as the stock is under fair value. We are forecasting a lower yield five years from now as the stock's valuation could move up. The yield is at an all-time high as of now given the intense weakness in the stock, yielding 5.6%.

Hormel boosted its dividend once more at the beginning of fiscal 2026, marking its 60th consecutive year of dividend increases.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2026	2031
Payout	35%	43%	40%	48%	56%	57%	57%	68%	72%	84%	78%	71%

Hormel's payout ratio is 78% of earnings, and we expect it could drift lower over time as earnings outpace dividend growth. Management is certainly committed to the dividend, but it wants to acquire growth as well, which uses cash.

Hormel's main competitive advantage is its ~40 products that are either #1 or #2 in their category. Hormel has brands that are proven, and that leadership position is difficult for competitors to supplant. In addition, Hormel has a global network of distributors that few food companies can rival. Hormel's earnings-per-share actually grew during the Great Recession while most of the world was in rather dire straits, a testament to the company's defensive nature.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Hormel looks quite undervalued today in our view. The company is in a tough spot as it tries to grow without sacrificing margins given supply chain and input cost inflation pressures, as well as lower selling prices and production disruptions. With the valuation under fair value, and modest growth, we forecast 14.2% total annual returns for Hormel. This could accrue from 5% growth, with the 5.6% yield and 5.2% valuation tailwind. Given this, and the company's exemplary dividend history, we reiterate the stock at a buy rating. We note investors will likely need to be patient with Hormel.
