Perrigo's history goes all the way back to 1887 when Luther Perrigo, the proprietor of a general store and apple-drying business, had the idea to package and distribute patented medicines and household items for country stores. Today, Perrigo is headquartered in Ireland. It operates in the healthcare sector as a manufacturer of over-the-counter consumer products. The company is composed of three segments, including Self Care, Specialty Care, and Infant Formula. The company generates ~$4.1 billion in annual revenue.

On February 19th, 2025, Perrigo announced that it was raising its quarterly dividend 5.1% to $0.29, extending the company's dividend growth streak to 23 consecutive years.

On August 5th, 2026, Perrigo announced second quarter results for the period ending June 27th, 2026. For the quarter, revenue decreased 3.8% to $1.02 billion, but this topped estimates by $10 million. Adjusted earnings-per-share of $0.50 compared to $0.57 in the prior year, but this was $0.15 better than expected.

For the quarter, all in organic revenue was lower by 1.3% while core organic revenue fell 3.1%. On an organic basis, Self Care was down 3.9% and Specialty Care decreased 2.9% while Infant Formula was up 23.1%. As mentioned previously, the Infant Formula segment remains under strategic review. The adjusted gross margin contracted 370 basis points to 30.7% in Q2. The company announced a cost savings program in Q4 2023 that is projected to create pre-tax savings of $140 million to $170 million by the end of 2026. In 2025, the company realized $167 million of savings with $35 million reinvested in the business.

Perrigo provided an updated outlook for 2026 as well. Organic core revenue is projected to be -3.5% to +0.5% compared -1.5% to -5.5% previously. Adjusted earnings-per-share are still projected to be in a range of $2.00 to $2.30.

Perrigo grew earnings at a rapid pace in the years after the Great Recession ended. However, earnings have declined precipitously since 2015. Perrigo's problems started in 2013, when the company acquired biotechnology company Elan for nearly $7 billion. This huge acquisition saddled Perrigo with lots of debt, and greatly expanded the company's pharmaceutical business—at just the wrong time. Falling drug prices and the recent backlash against opioids in the U.S. has caused a significant deterioration in Perrigo's earnings growth. In response, the company has scaled back its pharmaceutical operations. Consumer health products now represent the vast majority of total revenue. And, the company divested its pharmaceutical segment to further focus on consumer products. Focusing on consumer products will add stability to Perrigo, but these products typically grow at a lower rate than pharmaceuticals. Overall, we expect 3% annual earnings growth through 2031, down from 5% previously.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	Now	2031
Avg. P/E	20.7	15.8	16.5	12.3	12.9	18.9	16.5	12.5	10.0	4.9	6.9	6.0
Avg. Yld.	0.6%	0.8%	1.0%	1.7%	1.7%	2.5%	3.1%	3.4%	4.3%	8.2%	7.8%	9.0%

Shares have gained 32.5%, since our May 26th, 2026 report. Over the past 10 years, Perrigo stock traded for an average price-to-earnings ratio of 14.1. Investors should note that the 10-year average valuation includes several years of high earnings growth, which justified a higher valuation. That said, the earnings decline in recent years and expectations for future growth do not justify a price-to-earnings ratio above 20 in our opinion. Based on earnings-per-share guidance for 2026, the stock has a P/E of just 6.9. We reaffirm our lowered target price-to-earnings ratio to 6 from 10 due to recent poor results. Reverting to our valuation target by 2031 would reduce annual returns by 2.7% over this period.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

Year	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2026	2031
Payout	11%	13%	17%	21%	22%	47%	50%	42%	43%	42%	54%	54%

Perrigo does not rank highly in terms of safety. The debt incurred from the Elan acquisition caused its interest coverage ratio to erode significantly in recent years. That said, the company does have a significant competitive advantage. Perrigo is one of the largest manufacturers of OTC products, which gives it a leading position in its key markets. It also should perform well in a recession as these product categories tend to hold up, even if the economy enters a downturn. Perrigo’s expected dividend payout ratio for 2026 is 54% of the expected adjusted EPS for the year. However, the company has seen much weaker GAAP EPS results in recent years. Additionally, the dividend has now been maintained for six consecutive quarters. We believe that there is some risk for a dividend cut in the future.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Perrigo is projected to return 7.6% annually over the next five years, down from 13.8% previously. This projected return stems from a 3% earnings growth rate and a starting dividend yield of 7.8%, partially offset by a low single-digit headwind from multiple contraction. Perrigo’s segments remain challenged and the very high dividend yield speaks to the risks with the underlying company. We maintain our five-year price target of $15 due to guidance for the year. We continue to rate shares of Perrigo as a hold due to projected returns and a weak dividend risk score.
